

TRAC – Privacy Policy

This site uses cookies. You may delete and block all cookies from this site, but parts of the site will not work.

Our website uses industry standard SSL (https) encryption throughout.

This site does not participate in the disclosure or resale of data. No invasive tracking or targeted advertising happens on this website. We only engage in the collection of data essential to provide information or services to you in a safe and efficient manner.

Like most other websites, this website uses small tracking cookies to enhance your browsing experience, help you use our website and display any interactive content.

Essential tracking cookies are required for important tasks, such as the display of some site content, for example Youtube videos or PDF files. You cannot opt-out of these essential cookies and your use of this website assumes your acceptance to having these essential cookies set on your computer.

Within your web browser are software settings, you can freely control what cookies are stored on your computer and / or delete them at any time.

Any email communication you have with us will be treated with confidentiality. We will never forward-on correspondence without your prior permission. Neither will we share your details or add your details to a mailing list without your prior consent.

We do not hold any personally identifiable information unless you specifically give us permission to do so, for example an email list, if you have any questions about how we safeguard your privacy please get in touch via email to: webadmin@tracnewent.org.uk